

David Doyle

Alongside his practice as a community artist, David has spent the past 15 years working across Western Australia on the design and delivery of community cultural development programs for people with disabilities and mental illness.

A graduate of Canberra School of Art, ANU and Edith Cowan University, David gained accreditation as a Partnership Broker through the UK based PBAS scheme in 2005. He has served as a member of the Australia Council for the Arts, Arts and Health Strategy Committee and Community Partnerships Committee, Healthway's Arts Advisory Community a Director and past Chairperson of Arts Access Australia.

David is the Executive of DADAA Inc., an Arts organisation dedicated to 'Arts for Social Change' and is also the editor of Proving the Practice.